Recession Warning Given UN By Jobert

10 (Reuters).—French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert warned today that the world's current industrial slowdown could easily develop into a recession and cause a global crisis.

In an address to the General Assembly on the opening day of its political debate on economic problems, he discosed that France's trade balance this year is expected to show a deficit of $4 billion and $5 billion. Mr. Jobert urged delegates not to allow their view of the situation to be obscured by the four-fold increase in oil prices, which he said is only one sign of 2 more general crisis in international economic relations that has long been in the making.

President Houari Boumedienne of Algeria, speaking after Mr.
Jobert, defended oil-price rises and blamed the industrialized nations "overconsumption and gadgetization" for their economic difficulties.

"It is clearly inexcusable to im-pute the worsening of inflation to the rise in oil prices," he told the

He advocated nationalization of the natural resources of develop-ing lands, extension to other commodities of the control machinery effectively demonstrated by the Organization of Petroleum expering Countries, and cancellation of the international debts of many poorer states.

Mr. Boumediame, who will confer in Washington tomorrow with President Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, criticized the concept of the Washington energy conference called by Mr. Nixon in February.

It was more in the nature of a preliminary to a confrontation than the policifies of a desire for international copperation. The said.

[West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel challenged the newly rich oil countties and the Socialist bloc to join the wealthy industrial nations in sharing the burden of global assistance, other wire services reported. [Mr. Scheel told the assembly

Mrs. Meir Tells Cabinet Rift Forces Her to Quit

By Terence Smith

JERUSALEM, April 10 (NYT).

-Premier Golda Meir announced her resignation tonight, bringing down her month-old coalition government and making national elections likely within the next several months.

The 75-year-old premier said that she was resigning because deep divisions within her Labor party had made it impossible to continue. The party had reached an impasse in recent days over the issue of assigning political responsibility for Israel's military shortcomings at the out-set of the October war,

Her announcement came as a surprise, but party leaders and fellow cabinet ministers said later that they accepted it as genuine and final. Mrs. Meir had also threatened last month to step down but was persuaded to stay on and head the new government that was sworn in a month ago today.

Mrs. Meir has been premier five years. Caretaker Basis

Under Israeli law, Mrs. Meir and the members of the present cabinet will continue in office on a caretaker basis until a new government is formed. Tomorrow Mrs. Meir is expected to go to President Ephraim Katzir to inform him formally of her deci-

In theory the President could invite the right-wing opposition, the Liknd, to attempt to form a government prior to new elec-tions. This is unlikely, however, since the Likud lacks the par-liamentary strength to build a successful coalition.

Despite its caretaker status, the Meir government is expected to continue the indirect negotiations with Syria toward a disengagement-of-forces agreement, talks that have begun under American auspices. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is expected later this month to expedite the exchange of views.

EEC Feeling Better About Butter, for Now

BRUSSELS, April 10 (AP). -The Common Market's famous butter mountain has been reduced. EEC officials said today.

The amount of surplus butter in the Common Market's refrigerated stocks has dropped from 300,000 tons a year ago to just under 100.000 tons.

Officials cautioned, however, that the present amountequivalent to less than one month's consumption in the nine-nation EEC-could rise again as butter production increases during the spring and summer. The butter mountain has been an embarrassment to the Common Market since last year when 200,000 tons were sold cheaply to the Soviet Union.

The meeting had deadlocked over whether Defense Minister Moshe Dayan should accept parliamentary responsibility for the prewar errors and resign or whether, as Gen. The muted apology by Pakistan and the gesture by Bangladesh were disclosed with the release of the agreement, signed last night, by the foreign ministers of India, Pakistan

Essentially, Pakistan and Bangladesh gained what they wanted: Pakistan will receive all of its prisoners held in captivity since the war, in-cluding the 195 men whom Bangladesh wanted to place on trial for murder and rape. Bangladesh, which agreed to drop the trials, earned a public apology—a veiled acknowledgment by Pakistan that some of its

Whitlam Forced Into Calling General Election in Australia

CANBERRA, Australia, April 10 (Reuters).—Prime Minister Gough Whitlam today was prodded into calling a general election after the opposition took the unprecedented step of blocking two rootine money bills in the Senate.

Evidence that the opposition move was just a gambit to force Mr. Whitlam to call the elections came just two hours after he an-nounced that he would dissolve Parliament—the Senate passed the bills. The bills passed smoothly after an assurance from Foreign Minister Don Willessee that an election date would be announce ed once they had been approved. Thus Mr. Whitlam goes into general elections after his Labor party had just 16 months in office following 23 years in opposition. Opinion polls have indicated that his government has lost popularity since it came to power. But the polls also show that Mr. Whitlam gets a 10 percent higher esteem rating than Liberal party leader Bill Snedden, who replaced former Prime Minister William McMahon. The political maneuvering that came to a head today began when Mr. Whitlam saw an opportunity to wrest control of the Senate from three opposition parties by offering Sen. William Gair, a long-time political foc, th. ambassadorship to the Irish Republic.

The opposition saw through the strategem to get Labor an extra seat in the May 18 elections and decided to force Mr. Whitlam's hand by opposing the money bills.

African Drought Is Spreading, Harm'Almost Unmanageable'

By David B. Ottaway

WASHINGTON April 10 (WP). In affected include the follow-- Slowly but inguorably, the drought in Africa is spreading to more and more countries Early signs of possible disaster are appearing in Kenya and Taozania. But Grought conditions are also being reported in portions of many other countries. including the Sudan in East Africa, the Central African Republic, and Gambia, Cameroon, Nigeria, Dahomey Ghana aod Guinea in West Africa, These nations have so far largely escaped international attention in-volving the drought.

Most of these countries have refused offers of help and are sunggling with the problem on their own. But some, such as Ghana and the Central African Republic, have requested aid from the United States, if only to determine the drought's effects and preliminary steps that should be taken.

State Department relief officlais are no longer certain in soone cases whether the problem is drought or a geogral deterioration in the capacity of the countries to produce enough food. But a feeling is apparent among many of them that "the coneequences of the drought are necoming almost unmanageable," as one official pur it.

"The same kind of process is unfolding throughout the con-

At least 17 of the 39 countries and territories south of the Sahara now are affected by the drought. Most of these countries are in the savannah grassland belt stretching across the continent just below the desert. Only in five of them, however, has the drought really become a disaster-Mali, Niger, Chad, Mauritania and Ethiopis.

Reports now reaching the State Department from West, Central and East Africa tell of low rainfall in the forest area south of the savannah belt. They also tell of declining crops of cotton, peanuts, cocoa, coffee and grains, of soaring prices for staple foods, of ebbing rivers and underground water tables and of migrations of nomads and peasants in search of food and water.

As maoy as fā million people in the 17 countries may be in need of assistance to avoid famine and economic disaster.

In effect, many African countries that had been barely holding their own in the battle to develop is growth rate of 3 percent or less; are becoming "di-saster prone." as one top official of the U.S. Ageocy for International Development expressed it. The only bright spot for these afflicted African countries, many of which are among the world's poorest. is that the prices of raw materials and important export crops such as coffee and cotton are very high now, partly because of growing shortages re-sulting from the drought.

Kenya appears hardest hit and nearest disaster. About 70 percent of the entire country, the home of an estimated two milllon people, is affected, particularly in the northeast and eastern regions.

There are no reports of deaths among humans, but cattle losses are put at 250,000.

In neighboring Tanzania, gov ernment officials now talk of a "food crisis" and news reports from the capital of Dar es Salaam say the country's coffee and crops have dropped precipitously.

MEXICO CITY, April 10 (Reuters).—An organization known as the Black Hand, made up of of-ficials and policemen of the town of Tapachula, in southern Mexico, has killed about 200 persons in the last five years, police say.

Tapachula is a town of 50,000 inhabitants on the horder with Guatemala, where a rightist organization called the White Hand has been operating for years.

Federal police and army troops moved into the town recently and disarmed the municipal police force after investigations showed that many of the local policemen and the mayor were involved in being included.

The ruling about contributors other than Mr. Vesco came about during the testimony of Mr. Stone, who was confined to answering a single question about the record $2-million campaign contribution he had made to Mr.

A lawyer for Mr. Stans, Robert Barker, asked the judge to excuse the jury for a few moments. The indge did, and Mr. Barker then said: "Mr. Stone would state that, in 1968, because of his consideration that this was a rare time, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to support a President whose philosophy he felt strongly in favor of, and a unique position in the history of this country, he contributed $2 million."

Mr. Barker went on to say that "he would also testify that in 1972 be likewise gave support and he contributed in excess of $3 million. He would testify that when he gave this contribution he never requested or expected anything in return except the expected good government."

Mr. Barker argued that "it is important that this jury know that substantial citizens, with good intent, good motive, good purpose and a lifetime of public terest and service, are willing to make substantial amounts available."

"And this is the atmosphere in which Mr. Stans operated when he accepted $200,000 from Robert Vesco," Mr. Barker con-cluded.

The 40-seat bus disappeared from the company's depot March 23. The French police returned to San Remo today, and said that it had been parked for several days at the French Rivlera resort of Antibes, 50 miles to the west. They could not explain its crossing of the border

When you fly First Class with Pan Am you can eat in a proper dining room.

It seemed strange to us that most airlines offer more or less the same First Class service. They all pamper you, give you free drinks, show you movies, and give you your baggage first. We do all that as well - but we thought we should do a bit more than the other airlines, so that you'll want to fly First Class with us the next time...and the next.

So we built the only dining room in the skyupstairs in our 747s. Real table-clothed, flowered, knife and fork laid tables. Champagne cooled in silver buckets. Succulent beef carved in front of you

In fact, it's all exactly what you'd expect to find in a top restaurant. And like top restaurants you'll have to book a table beforehand.

The Watergate Summit

has begun to impinge increasingly on President Nixon's ability to conduct the nation's foreign policy.

The White House chief of staff, Alexander Haig, drew a contrary conclusion from the President's Parls visit last weekend. "A viable presidency is a cornerstone of wnrld security." Gen. Haig said, drawing the questionable conclusion that the viability of the Nixon presidency was demonstrated by Mr. Nixon's reception in Paris. But Gen. Halg's judgment was premature. Mr. Nixon's diplomatic conferences and street appearances have come under bitter criticism in France as unseemly at a time of memorial services for the late President Pompidou. The charge is made that this activity was designed to counter Watergate by providing evidence of the President's continued influence abroad.

Even more important is the acknowledgment by Secretary of State Kissinger's chlef Soviet adviser that Watergate played a negative role during Mr. Kissinger's recent taiks-and many diplomatic disappointments -in Moscow. State Department counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt indicated that Soviet leaders, as a result of Watergate, hesitate to enter new agreements that require congres-

Congressional resistance on trade agreements made by Mr. Nixon two years ago was mentioned by Mr. Sonnenfeldt as a specific example. But a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT-2) would also require congressional approval. Mr. Kissinger's blagest disappointment was his inability to Watergate, after a considerable lag, now make an agreed "conceptual breakthrough" with the Russians on SALT-2.

Soviet Comunist party secretary Brezhnev and Mr. Nixon both seem determined to maintain the détente atmosphere and to proceed with Mr. Nixnn's Moscow visit this summer. But that does not assure the conclusion of important agreements.

The danger in regard to SALT is not, as some suppose, that a weakened Nixon will sacrifice American interests to obtain a Moscow agreement as a counter to Watergate. The real danger is that a reasonable SALT-2 agreement will be attacked even more violently than the reasonable SALT-1 agreement. Mr. Brezhnev or Mr. Nixon, or both, might prefer to delay a SALT-2 agreement rather than have it repudiated hy the U.S. Senate.

The American national interest, however, iles in achieving a SALT-2 agreement this year. Otherwise, the approaching Soviet deployment of newly-developed MIRV multiple warhead missiles could take the arms race past another critical point of no return. If that deployment pattern is not limited in advance by mutual agreement, a further American huildup and a new spiral in the arms race will be hard to avold.

All this points to a need for the Congress to proceed with all deliherate speed in resolving the Watergate debate. That would be so even if Mr. Nixon were not planning a Moscow trip this summer. But the prospect of that voyage and the need for a new SALT pact make it more desirable than ever that the national political crisis be resolved helore many more months have gone hy.

Mr. Saxbe's Myths

The attorney general's list of subversive organizations is, like all punitive rosters drawn up by fearful governments, a shameful page in the nation's annals. An attorney general with the good sense to scrap that useless and vindictive document need offer no explanation or apology. How, then, is one to explain the thought process, if any, that prompted Attorney General William Saxbe to justify his sensible action hy suggesting that the list had been rendered obsolete because Communism has lost its attractiveness to "the Jewish intellectual, who was in those [McCarthy] days very enamored of the Communist party"?

This and subsequent non sequiturs, while explaining nothing whatsoever about the need for the lists in question, offer some insight - however hiurred - into Mr. Saxbe's judgments formed of a jumble of stereotypes and ill-digested myths.

The discovery of Mr. Saxbe's lack of perception can come as no surprise. He is the man who once thought that the perpetrators of Watergate ought merely to be given "clown suits" for their "ridiculous" actions. At another time, he chose to disassociate himself from the call by Elliot Richardson, his predecessor, for a de-politicized Justice Department. Most recently, in a bigbly untimely get-tough response to Patricia Hearst's kidnappers, he was called "damn near irresponsible" by the victim's father, in a gross understatement.

It is fair to say that there has been no sign of malice in Mr. Saxbe's utterancesonly a consistent show of harebrained obtuseness, mixed with ignorance. But his unthinking statements suggest strongly the limitations of mind that Mr. Saxbe brings to a once-revered post that demands judgmind. The picture that emerges is one of ment, balance, discernment - and common

Alternative to the Atlantic Pact?

The 25th anniversary of NATO was not celebrated with faniare. The hour is not favorable for great demonstrations of pride and self-confidence. Nevertheless, the anniversary is notable. The West has not seen such a long-lived alliance of this kind since the days of ancient Attica. Unlike its Greek predecessor, NATO has not bad to engage in comhat. Its success lles in the maintenance of peace and the freedom of its members.

Is the framework of the pact about to shatter? Up to a point, crises can be talked into existence. There is certainly more than mere rhetoric in the present one, but at the same time the phrases in which it is heing expressed go further than the facts really justify. Anyone playing with the idea of dissolving the Atlantic Ailiance as a bond between Europe and America must have an alternative. For Europe the alternative is clear: mevitable "Finlandization." With or without the EEC-withnut the American backhone the states of the Old World would be unable to withstand the pressure of the Soviet superpower. They would have to bow to it far more than they already do in various respects.

Whitlam and General Election

the prime minister is being drawn into a general election which, at the outset, was not fully intended. The likely defeat in the Senate of two government finance bills means that Mr. Whitlam has no constitutional option but to call for the dissolution of both the Senate and the House of Representatives. He has been saying that he would exercise this option with or without defeat. When he won in December, 1972, he ended 23 years in opposition for the Labor party. He cannot be certain now that he is fighting or the right issues. . . .

Mr. Whitlam's exasperation with the Senate has produced this situation. Half of its 80 memhers . . . had been due for re-election on May 18. A crude manenver, involving a senator in the small Democratic Labor party. was intended to make a Labor majority in the Senate possible. The opposition saw this as skulduggery and responded in kind for the first time in federal history by deciding to reject the finance hills. The pressure has been hullding up for some time. . . WASHINGTON-You can hardly pick up a paper these days without reading about some move or countermove in the White House or the Congress that is supposed to influence the outcome of the impeachment proceedings against President Nixou. Usually these are side issues, having very little, if anything, to do with the evidence for or against impeachment and conviction, but they are important tactical moves that could be influential or even decisive on the final judgment.

Item: For example, the White spelled out in the most careful House demanded that the Presldent's lawyer, James St. Clair, be allowed to sit with the House Judiciary Committee's staif to argue the President's case. This was not normal procedure, hut seemed reasonable to the Repuh-The Democrats agreed. to avoid an argument that would have split the committee along partisan lines and diverted attention from the evidence.

Item: Sen Jacob Javits. R-N.Y. recently took note of what he called "rumors" and "indications" that President Nixon was trying to tailor administration policy to woo the support of a conservative bloc" of senators large enough to forestall his conviction, that is, one-third plus one of the Senate's 100 mem-

"It would be very tragic," Ja-vits said. "If the President began to play impeachment politics' with domestic legislation and foreign policy, and I feel there are enough indicatinns of this to cause concern."

Item: The President is mounting a very active campaign, hy his intervention in the Michigan congressional election campaign and by his recent diplomatic and personal activities at the memorial services in Paris for the late President Pompidou of France, to persuade public opinion that he is an effective campaigner at home and an indispensable campaigner for peace abroad.

Point Dramatized

His principal White House assistant, Gen. Alexander Haig jr., dramatized the point-while the Paris newspapers were criticizing pidou funeral service for political purpose-by saying:

"It was very evident that European leaders and world leaders with whom the President met continue to look to the United States and President Nixon as an essential factor in the realization of the continuing efforts to develop a structure for a stable international environment."

Well, all this is very interesting and understandable. The idea is growing here, and apparently even within the White House, that the House Judiciary Committee, and maybe even the House itself, will vote out articles of impeschment, and that the issue will finally be whether 34 members of the Senate will finally save him.

Nobody can hisme the President for trying to save his political life, for demonstrating bis personal energy, his political support, for appealing to public opinion in his televised meetings with selected and sympathetle audiences, even for trying to turn the judicial impeachment process into a partisan split, which, if successful, would assure enough votes to hlock conviction in the justice according to the Con-stitution and laws," so help them

The case for reading the rules and the Constitution again in these tragic times is very strong. For somehow the past has anticipated the present even better than we have understood it our-

God. In short, that they should not vote in accordance with ideology or party, or be influenced hy personal sympathy or dramatic side shows, but should render judgment on the evidence as jurors in a Senate trial, "according to the Constitution and lay on a massage table, a doctor ministering to his aching back, when Henry Kissinger came in to give him the bad news during the Moscow summit conference of 1972.

Soviet negotiators would not budge on two areas in which a strategic arms limitation agree ment would leave the United States at a disadvantage. President Nixon told his national security adviser to keep negotiating, but to let the other side know that the President was ready to return to the United States withnut a SALT treaty.

Mr. Kissinger did so; the Russions caved, and the first SALT agreement was signed. All of us there marveled at the President's cold-blooded poker-playing.

What Risk?

Long afterward, I wondered: What "political risk" had Mr. Nixon taken? The first SALT agreement received polite applause from the left and centur, some criticism from the right. But if the summit had ended with his refusal to sign a lopsided agreement, the political left at home could not have faulted him, and the hardline right would have hailed him as a hero.

In political terms, Mr. Nixon in Moscow was in a no-lose situation: Because the Russians knew he was quite prepared to go back without an agreement, they proceeded to settle on fair terms,

This episode comes to mind as President Nixon prepares to visit Moscow again this summer: Many Americans are worried about a President afflicted with Watergate weakness dealing with the Russians: Won't be be inclined to make any deal he can get just to prop up his popular-

The worry is dramatized by the imminence of impeachment, and deepened by indications of the failure of Secretary of State Kassinger's preliminary trip to Moscow. The Soviet press has been attacking the stories based on Kissinger background briefings as destructive of detente. making it appear that the SALT negotiations are falling apart.

Let Us Think -To understand what is going on, let us think like superpower not yet come. Second, battered American presidents do not send high-flying secretaries of state to Mosto giory in "conceptual

WASHINGTON-The President breakthroughs," which migh make a crucial presidential in closing the deal seem to be unnecessary clinking of chan pagne glasses. #### Moscow Kitchen

Richard Nixon began in th late 1940s by lambasting the Communists; I recall taking picture of him in a Moscow kitchen in 1959 that we halled as evidence of how he could "stand up to the Russians"; there would be some poetic justice if he survived as President b "standing up to the Russians one more time.

The fourth fact of power pol itics: The Russians know all about the President's present weakness, his need for hardling support, and his old-time talents in cultivating that garden. Anatoly Dobrynin understands the pressures of American politics better than most American politicians.

Therefore, paradoxically, the political vulnerability of the President becomes a negotiating strength: If the Russlans want to make any kind of SALT deal, they will have to take into account the Nixon need to cater his own right wing,

All of which is why Mr. Nixon will be going to Moscow this summer, come hell or high erimes. If he fails to reach an arms control agreement, he will eurvive as president with no loss to the nation of its strategic position; if he succeeds, he will be blessed by the grandchildren est peacemaker of his time.

While well aware of the monelary cost, few Americans realize the energy cost of our high-meat diets. About 150 gallons of fuel, each year, are required to raise the crops eventually feeding each American. But much of the harvest, including that of some 80 million acres in corn, feeds livestock. > Former Prime Minister Edgar Faure, a veteran centrist politician, announced his candidacy early in order to hreak up the present governing coalition which links the Gaullists and the Independent Republicans. The Communists declined to put forward their own candidate presumably so that it would not be demonstrated that they had less votes than the Socialists, whn have a strong presidential candidate in former Interior Minister François Mitterrand.

Not only have cheap political games marked tha debut of the campaign but the candidates are 2 good deal less than Olympian in stature in stature. Mr. Chaban-Del-mas has been involved in a controversy over his taxes.

Mr. Mitterrand, whom I visited at his home the other day, presents himself as a family man of grave dignity. But not so long ago he was known as a publicityseeking adventurer.

Given these personal qualities the candidates are not going to be in position to impose their own views in the imperious way of De Gaulle. They are going to have to court popular favor and make deals right and left. Inevitably the presidential office will lose prestige and the National Assembly will acquire authority. France is already on the way back to being a parliamentary republic.

The institutional transition finds an exact counterpart in foreign affairs. Because of his prestige, De Gaulle was able to impose on this country a policy which stressed French in-dependence as a nuclear power pursuing its own special interests in dealing with the Communist world, the Near East and Europe.

That France-first line is not particularly popular here—es-pecially since heavy outlays for national security have worked to promote inflation. A public npinion poli just released by the magazine L'Express, for example shows that while 68 percent of Frenchmen regard high prices as a burning issue, only 13 percent think it is important for the next president to maintain France's position in the world.

Most of the candidates are already on record against the Gaul-list foreign policy.

Mr. Mitterrand, though backed by the Communists, favors an integrated Western Europe. So strong is his support for the Atlantic Alliance that he startled George McGovern by the vehemence ni his insistence that American troops remain in West Germany. As to Mr. Chaban-Delmas, his chief adviser, Jacque Delors, believes the French economy can only be managed in the context of European coopers-

No doubt there will be some lip service paid to Gaullist principles during the electoral campaign, and perhaps the first months of the new regime. But the long-range outlook goes other way. All signs indicate that this country is on the point of closing the Gaullist parenthesis

ROME, April 10 (NYT).—The Vatican, in an unusual procedurc, today amended a remark by Pope Paul VI on the future of Jerusalem

The new wording seemed to indicate a hardened Vatican policy on the politically sensitive

In an address during his weekly general audience, the Pope this morning advocated an "appropriate international juridical guardianship for the holy places" in the Middle East, and deplored the fact that Jerusalem was still at the center of controversy.

More than 10,000 Holy Week pilgrims and tourists were present in the Vatican's modern audience hall on the south side of St. Peter's Basilica. Most of them did not grasp the meaning of the Pope's speech, which was ın Italian.

The original wording of the papal statement on the religious shrines in the Holy Land, and on Jerusalem, appeared later in the bulletin that the Pontifical Commission for Social Commuoications, the Vatican's public information department, distribmes daily in its press room near St Peter's Square.

Early this afternoon, Vatican press officers withdrew the mimeographed bulletin and substituted another one. It quoted the Pope as having called for "an appropriate statute with international guarantees for the holy city of Jerusalem and a convenient juridical guardianship for the holy places."

Diplomats and newsmen who follow Vatican activities, and have learned to analyze every word in napal pronouncements to the point of hair-splitting, immediately speculated on the meaning of the change.

The prevailing view among there observers tonight was that Pope Paul seemed to be reverting to the old Vatican thesis of internationalization of Jerusalem. The chief Vatican spokesman for the press. Federico Alessan-drini, declared himself unable to comment on the significance of fine change. He said that he han not attended the papal audience, and suggested that the correclion may bave been due to a typing error in the orginal text, adding: "Such things do happen."

OPERA IN PARIS-

Paying a Debt and Getting a Hit

By David Stevens

PARIS, April 10 (IHT).—The Paris Opera joined last night in the strangely belated revival of Verdi's "I Vespri Siciliani." aimultaneously discharging an old debt to the composer and acquiring an authentic hit for the season's repertory.

Strangely belated, hecause although it is one of the composer's middle-to-late works— falling between "La Traviata" and "Simon Boccanegra"—tt has not really taken a significant part in the Great Verdi Revival, which has been going on for close to half a century and has restored to the active repertory several half-neglected works. It did not, like some of Verdi's flawed masterworks, beoefit from a revision by the composer himself. Nor. un-til very recently, had it been recorded in full—a consecration bestowed in the long-play era on even the composer's most obscure early operas.

At the bottom of this mysteri-ous business is the origin of the work, which was a commission from the Paris Opera for a work to be given during the grand exhibition of 1855. It was to be a grand opers in the manner invented by Meyerbeer and the ublquitoua librettist Eugène Scribe —five acts with hallet, grand choruses, spectacular effects, magnificent scenery and a historical subject. Scribe supplied the libretto, a lot of warmed-over piers were massacred in a popular

Enoogh Agony

This job gave Verdi enough work, as he said, "to stun a bull." and enough agony to make him leery of the Opera for a lifetime experience reaching its farcical climax when the leading soprano disappeared with her boy friend for a few weeks during rehearsals. She sang the premierc anyway, which gives you an idea ni how the Paris Opera was run in those days. More seriously, Verdi had to deal with a libretto that was the precise opposite of what he always wanted and responded to best-terseness and emotional sincerity. Yet, it was a success here and in Italy before falling out of sight.

There is a wealth of music here straight out of Verdi's top drawer. If he responded mechanically to some mechanical attuations, he also supplied rich mustcal cloth-ing for Scribe's collection of cardboard dummies. Besides the relatively well-known selections— the splendid overture, the popular bass aria "O tu Palermo," the haritone's "In hraccio alle dovizie," and the soprano'e last-act showpiece, the so-called Bolero-there are some fine soprano-tenor duets, a superb scene for tenor and haritone that stands squarely in the great line of Verdian father-son duets, a powerfully expressive quartet, and a moving purporting to deal with the events of Easter Mondsy of 1232 in Palermo, when the French occuform, making it a bit of an anachronism in Verdi's steady march toward "Otello" and "Faistaff," much of the music also looks ahead-such as the machinations of the assassins against a background of deliberately trivial ball music. a technique already used and to be used even more tellingly in tha final act of "Un Ballo in Mas-

Same Team

The Paris production comes hy way nf the Hamburg State Opera and the New York Met, where it has already been produced by the same team, headed by John Dex-ter, the English stage director, and Josef Svoboda, the Czech scenic designer and theorist.

Svoboda eschews realism in favor of a timeless abstraction. His basic unit of a long flight of stairs is subjected to various changes in shape, and with the addition of other scenic units stands for a variety of locations. It is disconcerting in an un-familiar (pseudo) historical work to be deprived of representational scenery, but there are powerful compensations.

The overhead lighting throws the action into a permanently mobile chiaroscuro, of which Jan Skalicky's black-white costumes are an integral element. The flexibility of the set gives a welcome fluidity to the procrustean five-act format, and papers over the more incomprehensible comings and goings in the pict. Dexter uses the stairway to move his characters with expressive effect; concentrating on their elemental human dilemmas. The scene in which he has Procide etare down at Arrigo and Elena from the glocm at the top of the stairs. during their Act II duet, adds a dimension to Scribe's mindless plotter with one silent coup de théátre.

This is not, however, a work that runs by itself, and on the

The principal cut in the original score was, of course, the half-hour ballet that was obligatory in 1855 and superfluous now (those interested in the music can hear it, lavishly included in the recent RCA recording), but it remains a long work, lasting three and a half hours with two intermissions.

FASHION New Blood

Courtesy of A Government

By Hebe Dorsey

LONDON, April 11 (IET).—The British fashlon scene gets more interesting all the time bel cause it keeps getting new blood. The reason? The fact that the government has put up so much money to encourage talent," said Daphne Brooker, head of the School of Fashior at Kingston's Polytechnic.

There are 48 national fashion schools in England (compared to one in Paris) which keep feeding the market. Some of the results could be seen last weekend at a show of eight young designers dubted "Tha New Wave." Out of the eight, the three best ones, Ann Buck, and Sue and Helen came from British fashion schools.

"The course lasts three years and anybody can apply," said Miss Brooker, who has held the job for 10 years. "Students must be at least 18 and have had one year of preliminary art training. We're very small and very selective. We only take 20 a year. But if they're accepted they automatically ge a scholar-

Miss Brooker, described as "the best fashion teacher in the country" by Prudence Glynn, the Times (London) fashion editor, is red-haired soft-voiced but de-termined. She studied at the Royal College of Art and "was sure I wouldn't teach - because my mother was a teacher." But after a spell with theater design, where she worked a lot on modern clothes, she started teaching at the Polytechnic. She mixes technical training, such as cutting patterns or sketch designs, with real projects for the industry. For instante, she puts her students on a three-week job for Liberty, working out the firm's next print, or asks them to develop a new coat shape for Wallis shops. We try to break the routine." That also means a week at the Victoria and Albert Museum library or a trip to Paris to do the rounds of the fashion houses. At the end of this month, she is taking 12 of her best students to Saint Gall. Switzerland, to participate in a centest put on by the embroidery industry. To do her selection, she had to screen 15,000 designs. Miss Brooker also calls on designers from the industry to come as guest teachers, "We've had Richard Smith (Chelve Cobbler) for shoe. Graham Smith, who does levely hats. and Grahan Margaret Langston, who's not so well known but does executort jewelry. Over half our teaching is done that way."

Fast Pace "The pace of work is very fest and students do get exhausted at times but they get around a lot," she said. keeping it moving. But we must have a careful eye and watch out for the industry. We tread a tight rope between the commercially acceptable and the wild talent. "I believe the students should have a lovely time when they're at college. Nevertheless, we must see that when they leave, they don't receive a soul-destroying shock."

Some of them also make good.

Basic Nutriment

In its long history as a human food, the chestnut has been an allment of extremes: it has provided luxurious dishes for the rich, but more often the basic nutriment for the poor. In its aristocratic aspect it wiped out the distinguished Italian Challant family, whose last survivor, Giulio Giacomito, 12 at the time. died from a surfeit of chestnut cream. As a festive food, the chestnut eppears on the New Year's menu in Japan (a country where connoisseurs do nut hesitate to send to distant citles for the exact type of chestnut they prefer! hut this may be ct the nut than the result of the cuetom of composing the meal of foods symbolizing the virtues which it is hoped will be exercised during the coming year. Part of the Sino-Japanese character which means "mastery" suggests the sign for "chestnut" -a pun in ideograms.

of the chestnut which makes it a holiday food in Modena, Italy, where it is served on St. Martin's Day, soaked in wine must and then roasted. White wine accompanies chestnuts at the castagnade, the annual festival at which La Garde-Freinet, pear St.-Tropez, France, reminds the nation that it grows the best chestants of the region. The marron glace (candied chestant) is in France a traditional harbinger of the Christmas-New Year's holiday season. This com-plicated confection, whose prep-aration involves 16 separate operations, is claimed by the French, who say they invented it in the time of Louis XIV; but Arctino had praised the candied chestnuts of Chiusa Pesio in

Piedmont 150 years earlier. The chestnut has always been much less important for the rich than for the poor, who could pick up free in the forests a filling food capable of replacing such staples as cereals or pota-toes. In the three countries which today still make the largest use of chestnuts—Japan, Italy and France-it has often been the principal food of the poor. It was so described in Italy as early as the third century BC., and after the collapse of the Roman Empire many Italian populations were reduced largely to chestnuts, eaten boiled or rossted

In English we talk of a diet of bread and water where the French would say jeuner à l'eau et à la châtaigne (fasting on water and chestnuts); note that the kind of chestnut mentioned here is not the marron, which would carry too rich a connotation. Molière established the miserly character of Herpagon (simultaneously underlining the lowly position of the chestant) when he depicted him as giving what he considered a sumptuous banquet, beginning with "a few bolled chestnuts." Before the potato entered the French larder. chestnnts provided the basic food of the poor; in Corsica, always and still one of the poorest parts of France, chestants hold the place elsewhere occupied by the potato. Chestnuts in Corsica have also been used as a cheap

225-04-24 a new name in ready-to-wear a boutique parision women: ciready evol pail - colv 'ayurea contractées 25 oversue Matignon

Presumably it is the quality substitute for bread; the chestnut was referred to sarcastically as "the Corsican bread tree." Corsicans still say of persons who eat cheaply and badly, "they eat out of the drawer," a reminder of the days when wild chestnuts gathered in the woods were spread out to dry in bureau drawers, to which one had recourse on the not infrequent occasions when there was nothing else to eat. The Contents "The chestnut," a leading marron glace maker of Privas once said for publication, "can be con-sidered a complete food." This is something of an overstatement.

It is true that various peoples at various times have made do with little else, because they had little else, but they were not getting a balanced diet. Chestnuts are indeed highly nourishing: 3 1/2 ounces provide 250 calories and 3 1/3 pounds is enough to supply the day's entire caloric needs for an average worker. Dried chestnuts contain as much nitrogen as wheat. The nut is relatively rich in mineral salts, especially calcium, phosphorus and potassium-twice as much of the last as in cereals-which makes chestnuts excellent promoters of growth in infants. Unfortunately their vitamin content is much lower than that of grains, and it consists of the most fragile types (B, only a third as much as in wheat, and C) which are easily destroyed in cocking. Unfortunately also they are 40 percent starch-and their starches are of types particularly difficult to digest. Chestnuts should be avoided by dyspeptics, diabetics and the overweight: anyone who wants to remain slim should remember the cry of the 13th-century chestnut vendors in the streets of Paris: Châtaignes à rôtir, qui croissent aux bois. Près des montagnes, font la personne engressir. (Roasting chestnuts, which grow in the woods,/Near the mountains, they make a body fat,) Besides eating chestnuts, there is another variety; the origin of its name escapes me, unless perhaps it was invented by Isaac Hill Bromley (1833-1898) who referred to it early:

These dinner speeches the me. they are tedious, flat and stale: From a hundred thousand banquet tables comes a melancholy wail,
As a hundred thousand banqueters sit up in evening dress And salute each mouldy chestnut with a signal of distress.

LONDON. April 19 1Reuters) .-Sterling suffered heavy losses on foreign exchange markets today as a result of further declines in London interest rates.

The British currency's loss against the dollar in London was more than three cents at one stage, although it ended the day steadier and down by 2.75 cents at $2.3555.

The decline, the largest in one day for several months, came as the four main London clearing oanks cut their base lending rate by 0.5 percent to 12 1.2 percent. Cheaner borrowing was good news for companies trying to rebulld after the three-day week, and the Financial Times index of leading shares rose by 1.3 points on the day to 294.5. following an eight-point boost yesterday.

The effect on sterling, however. pointed up the dilemma for the Labor government in its efforts to bring interest rates down at home. If British rates fall below those offered in other centers, volatile money on deposit in London usually flows out of sterling into other currencies.

In a general retreat in Europe. previously-strong sterling lost ground against the West German mark, dropping to 8.07 DM from 5.12 overnight. The dollar, on the other hand, posted further advances against most European currencies. The Bank of England's weight-

The move is designed to expand the mutual fund, which, according to its directors, "isn't large enough to be able to absorb the necessary expenses of operating a regulated closed-end investment company on a profitable hasis." It is also designed to head off a possible delisting of its shares by the American Stock Exchange for failing to meet certain standards. The fund has 141,151 shares outstanding, recently valued at $681,774. That falls short of the amex's listing requirement of at least 200,000 publicly dield shares with a market value of at least $1 million.

WASHINGTON, April 10 (NYT). -Witnesses before a congressional subcommittee charged yesterday that major oil companies have been breaking anti-trust laws for years with the knowledge and sometimes the approval of the Departments of Justice and the Interior.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House subcommittee investigating federal oil and gas leasing policy, and three witnesses complained that the major oil corporations are either dictat-ing the terms of survival to smaller companies or forcing them

Rep. Dingell sald the connections between the companies were a 'monstrous web" of ties involving exploration, lease bidding, producing, refining, pipelines and marketing.

Rep. Dingell and the witnesses insisted that the practices of the major oil companies were anti-competitive and violated the Sherman and the Clayton antitrust acis.

One witness William Lamout, a former attorney in the antitrust division of the Justice Department, charged that one oil consortium made up of five com-panies on the West Coast had manipulated prices during the last eight years so that California received for state-owned oil $300 million less ibau its true value.

The testimony came during continuation of bearings into the impact of federal offshore oil leasing policies ou the smaller companies. The hearings are being held by the subcommittee on activities of regulatory agencies of

Are we running out of silver?

Today, an unusual supply-demand situation in silver offers you an opportunity to gain substantial profits.

For the past 23 years, world silver consumption has exceeded mine production. For each of the past 13 years, the gap has exceeded 100 million ounces.

Source: Review of the Silver Market by Handy & Harmon

Lately, the gap has been widening still further. In 1971, coosumption exceeded mine production by 133 million ounces. In 1972, by 184 million ounces. And in 1973, coosumption surpassed production hy more than 234 million ounces. As a result, the world is rapidly running out of

Major bull market in silver

When demand for an item consistently exceeds production, we can expect its price to rise. And that's exactly what began to happen to silver, late in 1971. By mid-1972, it was apparent that a major hull market in silver was under way.

By the end of 1972, silver had risen from $1.45 per ouoce to $2.fi2. Yet, despite the sharply higher prices, silver consumption actually grew

Gentlemen:

(up 9.1% from 1971). In 1973, the same pattern emerged: sharply higher silver prices (up to $3.26), along with increased consumption (up 15% over 1972). So far this year, the price of silver has broken all previous records.

Is there still time to "cash-in"?

With silver already at record prices, you may wonder: Is there still a chance for profits in silver? We believe so. Of course, no investment is without risk, but we believe the bull market in silver-and your opportunity for profits-is still in the early stage. We'd like to explain why, and suggest a few silver investments we believe will be particularly profitable in the years ahead.

So may we mail you a FREE copy of the new, expanded, Second Edition of The Case for Silver? This free informational booklet, by Louis E. Carabini, President of the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, show's you:

- When to expect the recurring soortfalls in mine production to create an acute shortage of silver;
- The unique properties of silver and why it's an essential, unsubstitutable commodity in most ap-
- Why consumption and production of silver are both largely unresponsive to price changes;
- Projections for the price of silver, including tim-
- Why silver is valued as a hedge against inflation and devaluation;
- Case histories of 4 bad inflations (including the nightmare runaway inflation in post World War I Germany), and how silver fared during each.
- Four ways of investing in silver: the drawbacks and advantages of each. Which seems to offer the best opportunity to gain both the profits you want and the protection from inflation you need.

Fisons in Europe.

big questions

ogo, we now ronk oming the leading British phormaceutical companies with on increasing international reputation.

Q.3. Is there a danger of Fisons becoming over-dependent on phormoceuticals?

A. No. Agrochemicals, for example, has a most satisfactory overseos growth, because of the increasing demond for the world's major food craps. A ronge of new products hos been introduced in the last two years including an autstandingly effective insecticide for which na country however small con fail ta find a use, and over 50% of Agrochemical soles went overseas last year.

Q.4. Whot does the future hald for

A. Given that health is of fundamental importance in the warld, Fisons are os well placed as most to help look after humon health, animal health and plant health—globally.

MARY GO HORSE AROUND?"

THE LATE HARVEY GROSBECK By Gilbert Millstein. Doubleday. 285 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

of his brow runs into his eyes, and he feels that his audience is not worth his ulcer. His jokes will come forth deformed by the labor that produced them, the afterbirth still clinging. He will drop all pretenses, all suggestion of sublimation, and simply attack. If he cannot seduce, why then he will ravish. This is the recurrent sour note in an otherwise successful comedy, "The Late Harvey Grosbeck," by Gil-bert Millstein. Nursing a grudge is the inevitable expression, for Mr. Millstein ministers to his private sore spots with a grotesquely disproportionate solici-tude. He will dose a rancorous gibe with a whole dictionary of preciosities, trying to dress it up as a witticism. In most other respects, "The Late Harvey Grosbeck" strikes me as an extremely lively picture of a cantankerous man winning a losing battle with life in the 1970s. Harvey Grosbeck is a passionate anachronism, a jaundiced, Jewish, shrunken Samuel Johnson, a man who, if his analysis had truly liberated him, could cheerfully have murdered anyone who egregiously misused a word, condemned an architectural curiosity to demolition, or em-braced a modish absurdity. Harvey's life is a carnage of Pyrrhic victories, a shower of Parthian shots. He is the Monday-morning quarterback of 20th-century his-

Harvey is a rewrite editor for a metropolitan newspaper that shall remain nameless. I will con-fine myself to remarking that, while no newspaper is beyond the reach of irony, Mr. Milistem's is more consoded than corrosive. Harvey's most inclusive complaint-for complaint is the impetus of his crabwise progressis that he has no metaphor by which to live, no symbol to serve or suffer for. This reduces Harvey to a series of random lunges at life, and Mr. Millstein's novel at form. If neither of them guite succeeds, they fall short with considerable elegance. The Late Harvey Grosbeck offers us so many secondary gratifications, as the Freudian analysts used to say, that it hardly matters whether or not it fails in its primary endeavor. The author takes an almost obscene delight in linguistically flaying anything that smacks of radical chic or garden-variety piety. 2fle way he pounces on a fine figure of a word is almost uxorious, as if it is his and his alone. He writes of Harvey's resolve to change his ways: "If epiphany is not to be experienced overnight, neither is the alteration of old habit; the pluck and iterance of reflex make their customary demands in charnel houses." Of the "intensified sexuality on the sidewalks of ond-rate nightclub comedian will turn ugly, when the sweat of his brow runs into his eyes, all very much the same. They rioted before the men, seeking confirmation from one another of what they were doing and drove all before them, all the while pushing at their hair, pulling at their skirts, chewing on bits of food bought on side streets.

Mr. Millstein has enough brip to pick you up and carry you bodily through his book. It is worth reading for the frequent set pieces, the cameos, alone. For Harvey is one of those wild-eyed men of principle who will never back away from a confrontation with the powers of darkness Faced with the catatonic indifference of the salespeople in a famous Fifth Avenue bookstore, he summons up unsuspected reserves of strength and trimphantly carries the issue to its reduction ad absurdum. Approached by a daughter of the counterculture begging money to buy food for her baby, he takes her to a grocery, buys the food, then goes home with her and feeds the baby himself. He even tries, in his determination to leave no untidy loose ends, to accept her tender of gratitude, but the fact that her tender parts are tattooed puts him off.

Though he ransacks the "rag and bone shop of the heart," Mr. Millstein can find no better fulcrum for his plot than an implansible Mafia threat on Harvey's life. While he belabors this for its comic and/or tragic potential, one feels that his talents could be much better employed. The Malia man is one of those "thought up" ideas that writers fall back on when nothing comes to them from their unconscious, when they have no clear notion of what they want to say or do to us. Considering the quality of his materials, though, the anthor acquits himself better than one might have expected.

Harvey's funeral, or fantasy of a funeral, is presided over by Baleen, the editor of his newspaper, who for once is given a Machiavellianism commensurate with his high position. Baleen decides to commemorate Harvey in terms of his own late enthusiasms, carried to the point of parody. After eulogizing Harvey in the platitudes he strove to seek out and destroy when he was alive, the editor decrees that, since Harvey was one of the last true lovers of his native city, his dirge would be a selection of songs about that metropolis, as well as a rendering of street cries common to the early half of the 19th century interpersed the calls of birds to whom New York was home: the common English sparrow, the grackle and the pigeon." When his funeral has wound its stubbornly contested way through the choked streets of Lower Manhattan su that Harvey can pay his last respects to the decaying landmarks so dear to his backward heart, he is to be laid to rest in Brooklyn, next to his hero, Boss Tweed.

But Mr. Millstein has too much surplus ingenuity to let his hero rest, here or in eternity. True to type, Harvey has the last word. As everyone knows, old rewrite editors never die-they just wear away, like a blue pencil too short to be sharpened one more time.

Meditation helped West defeat the contract in the diagramed

Three no-trump was reached after North had opened with a strong artificial bid of one club and East jumped to two diamonds. South's double was negative, indicating some high-card strength. On the next round, he decided to try for three no-trump rather than four hearts after West bid clubs and North hearts.

As the club bid marked the linesse in that suit as a winner, South could count eight sure tricks—and so could West. A diamond was led to the king, and if East had persevered with dia-monds South would have had his ninth trick, But East played well by shifting to the spade jack. South covered with the queen, and West won with the king. At this point, West plunged into meditation. He quickly saw that a diamond continuation would be an error; that a space return would allow dummy to score the nine, and that a club play would allow South to make three club tricks rather than two. The situation seemed to call for a heart lead, but West projected the play forward five tricks-and found that South was destined to come out on top unless he misjudged the play.

So West finally decided his only hope was to take advantage of declarer's ignorance of the spade situation. East's play of the jack strongly suggested that he had the ten, so West finally got the play moving again by produc-ing the spade eight. If South had now taken a further 15 minutes to analyze what West had been thinking about, he might have concluded that the play of the nine from dummy was indicated. But he took East's play of the spade jack at its face value as a sequence lead and played low from dummy.

The spade ace was taken, the club queen finessed successfully and hearts were cashed Finally. South took the club ace and played a spade, expecting Essi to win with the ten and concede the last trick to the diamond queen. But West produced the ten, to South's discomfiture, and the contract was down one.

But the 'Nightmare' Is Over

Home Run No. 715 Cost Aaron Some Sleep

By Joseph Durso

ATLANTA April 10 (NYT),-It was the "day after"-the day after he had madr baseball history-and Henry Aaron eased into the Atlanta Bravce' locker room, alloped some soft music into the cassette inside his eubiele, ant down on a wooden stool, yawned and said:

"The average person can't reason, all winter, spring trainlng, right up until today. Now Im just tired. Not let downmorrow. But not tonight."

The 40-year-old outfielder was beat because people wouldn't let him go to sleep after he bad driven a fastball pitched by Al Downing of the Lc- Angeles Dodgers into the bullpen in left field at 9:07 Monday night.

At the time, there were no outs for Allanta in the fourth inning, realize what a nightmare this has Darrell Evans was on first base heen. The last 10 days of last and Aaroo was being watched by a national talerision audience and a record crowd of 53,775 bowling ians in Atlanta Stadium.

When a relief pitcher named Aaron said in s low voice, yawn-tract for $1 million. After the ball on House made a leaping catch ing again. "Rome." Tom House made a leaping catch behind the six-foot wire fence skyrockets lighted the overcasisky and the crowd stood and roared for the man who had just hit the 715th home run of his 21-year career, breaking the record set by Babc Ruth between

What did be think about the commissioner's absence, after all the controversy and the "orders" (but the Braves start Aaron in Cincinnati over the weekend?
"I wasn't interested," Henry replied.

"It's been quiet for me to-ar," be said, "I haven't been out of the house. I was in the ballpark until 12:30 this morn-ing, then went home and wanted to go to sleep about 2, But the phone kept ringing, and shout 2 o'clock my mother and father and some friends came by. They stayed till 8, sort of a family celebration, and then I went to bed, got three or four bours sleep, and that was it. Once I'm up. I can't go back to sleep."

About 700 telegrams were being etacked upstaire in a etadlum office by Aaron's secretary, Carla Koplin, who has been running in-terference for him elnce last summer, Alt 23 other ballclubs in the big leagues sent telegrams, as did Yogi Berra, Billy Wli-liams, Ted Williams, Bill Cosby, Hank Greenberg, Joe Louis, Roy Campanella, the Atlanta Hawks basketball team and the New York Giants football team.

"I haven't talked to Carla yet today," Aaron said with compassion. "I may have to give her the rest of the year off.

"The ball and bat are on their way to New York They're insured for about half a million dol-lars. Don Rice, the national ad-rertising manager for Magnavox. is taking them back. The Magna-vox people want to show them to the public for five years, then send them to the Hall of Fame. I know that as long as the ball didn't land in the stands, I had a chance to get it back."

Borrowed Equipment The bat was a 34-ounce, 34-1 3 inch Louisville Slugger, the kind Aaron's been swinging most of his career with some minor changes—a little longer and heavier than the one be borrowed from Del Crandali 15 years ago. Wheo be took the big ewing Monday night, he was wearing a pair of baseball hoes left behind by Joe Pepitone when the former gay blade of the New York Yankees quit the Braves and headed for Japan. Much of Aaroo's personal gear was consigned to the Magnavox Corporation, which signed him last winter to a five-year con-

Henry-and Magnavox was spared the necessity of paying a huge ransom for it in a market where the bidding had reached $25,000. "I never had a dream of how it might happen." Aaron said. "I was just happy it happened-especially here, and on TV with my family in the ballpark." Also in the ballpark at this time were the white governor of day night, it was returned to Georgia, Jimmy Carter, and the black mayor of Atlanta, Maynard Jackson. They had stood next to each other on the field before the game, symbolizing to some observers the fact that Aaron had become a bero to hotb races after some sniping at a black ballplayer overtaking a legendary white man'e home-run record. After No. 715 cleared the fence, the game was interrupted for 11 minutes while Aaron etood besieged on the grazs. Later, bctween innings, he received a phone call from President Nixon, litviting him to the White House Still later, the Dodgers made the last of their six errors-under the pressure of history-and the Braves won the game, 7-4.

"I never was afraid of any injury during the off-season that might keep from going to the record. Aaron said. Then he phrased it in one of the little stoical expressions that he favors: "Whatevar will be, will be."

Later, Henry took a few swings in batting practice and then bundled himself into a windbreaker on the bench while the Dodgers recovered their poise and trounced the Braves, 9-2. The leading home-run hitter in baseball just sat and watched, surrounded by 10,548 customers and "3,137 empty seats.

ball so far, or so sharply between the fieldere, that it took them at least 16 to 20 seconds to retrieve it and throw it home. In the estliest years, on flelds that had no fences at all, this could happen more frequently than later, when all major league games were played in completely enclosed grounds.

So in 1906, for instance, major league teams played a total of 1.222 games and hit 249 home runs. The Chicago White Sox won the American League pennant, and the World Series, and hit a grand total of seven home

But by the end of the 1919 scason, baseball was in scrious trouble. Runters were widespread that gamblers had fixed the 1919 World Series, bribung the Chicago White Sox to lose to Cincinnati. In a post-war beem, other entertamments, especially the movies, were competing for effection. Total attendance for both leagues in 1019 was about 65 million, an average of 400,000

Cleveland shortstop. was struck in the head by a pitch thrown by Carl Mays of the Yankees, at the Polo Grounds, and Chapman suffered a double skull fracture. He died in the hospital the next morning. But even before these two orcit events, the scandal and the death, the wave of the future was beginning. tended, at least partly, to in-crease the batter's safety-but, of course, better vision for safety also meant better vision for bitting the ball. And the desired effect was immediale. In 1919, the two leagues had a combined batting everage of 263; in 1921 it was 291.

But the increase in home runs wasn't quite as immediate, be-cause the players of the day had all grown up indoctrinated in the old etyle-a level. controlled swing designed for singles. Under the new conditions, bowever-as Ruth was showing-a man could consistently clear fences. Ruth was so good he could do it anyhow; and Rogers Horns-by, regarded as the best of righthanded hitters, produced 42 home runs in 1922 (while batting .401). The next generation learned the lesson. When Ruth bit 60 homers in 1927, and bis teammste, Lou Gehrlg, 49, they ac-counted for nearly 12 percent of the 922 home runs bit that sea-son. By 1940, with no individual player hitting more than 43 Johnny Mizer, the two leagues were hitting 1,571 bomers. And by 1950 the total was beyond 2.000. More players blt homers

They struck out more, too.

By then, also, the real estate iscior bad done its work. To seli tickets, you must en-close your playing field with a fence. But when only a few thousands attend, permanent scals ere needed only behind home plate and along the base lines. The 'putting hubby through' diploma is a quaint relic today, but the practice it honored endures with variations in graduate and professional schools.

Supporting a Spouse Through College

By Nadine Brozan

NEW YORK (NYT).—It was called the "putting hubby through" diploma, and it was once awarded by universities as token thanks to wives of students.

The mock sheepskin is a quaint relic today, but the practice it honored-supporting a spouse while he became somehodyendures with variations in graduate and professional schools. But with the drive for equality propelling women into the upper reaches of academe, the decision to support a student husband is being weighed on a new scale. After all, the reasoning goes, if John can study medicine, why can't Jane; if he aspires to a professorship, why not she?

And in the face of dual ambitions, the question of who pays for whom and how has taken on new complexities. No statistics have yet surfaced, but impressions collected from New York to California indicate that, for all its impact, women's liberation has yet to turn the tide. In short, the wife working to sid her husband is still the norm.

Man's Rank

"This society still views it as more important for the husband to get an advanced degree, so important that wives are still willing to work toward that end. The man still comes first." said Irwin W. Sizer, dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology graduate school.

The man may indeed rank first, but for a growing band of couples it's only temporary. Many have devised formulas for the pursuit of two degrees; going through simultaneously, alternating, combining part-time employment and study, postponing

Whatever the blueprint, the constantly scaring tuition and cost of living-which can now total $6,000 to $8,000 a year-create a burden that is usually countered with a patchwork of resources.

The Alexander Romanovs, for example, have at various times financed his master's degree courses at the Manhattan School of Music and her doctoral work in French at Columbia University with an incentive award, federal, state and university loans and a gift of two months' rent from Mr. Romanov's

"Even so, we've sometimes taken out emergency loans from Columbia to pay the rent." Mrs. Romanov said, noting with relief that her husband now holds a fulltime teaching position while continuing his own studies.

While students struggle to make academic ends meet, universities find that drastic cutbacks in federal government and foundation aid have left them with fewer dollars for fellowships. As a result, financial officers are retooling the criteria on which they distribute aid, putting more emphasis on need and less on

"Right now none of us really knows how to assess need; it's an Alice-in-Wonderland situation," said Dean Peter McKinney of Harvard University's Graduate School of Aris and

How do young women feel about that clarion call in a time when they are redefining their own roles?

Their attitudes seem to be a delicate balance between hardnosed realism and cooperation.

"Everyone agrees that this is a joint decision that the husband will attend school, no matter what the sacrifice: postponement of children, no car, little furniture," said Carol Foglesong, president of the Dames Club, a 600-member organization of graduate students' wives and married graduate students at the University of Chicago.

"Many people feel, Tm going to put him through now, but he will put me through later," "she said.

Although she has a bachelor's degree from Wellesley College and a master's from Wesleyan University, Katharine Jones does not resent being a secretary at MIT, a job that became crucial when her husband's Danforth Foundation grant for work in English history at Harvard expired.

Bored at First

"When I first started almost three years ago. I was bored and felt I wasn't using my degrees, but I'm not planning a career, so I really don't mind," she said.

"No, I'm really not using my education," said Kari Nirmel of her position as a book processor at NYU's Elmer Bobst Library. "But I feel that because my husband is under a great deal of stress, it would be very difficult if I had a stressful job."

Mrs. Nirmel's husband, Chitta, decided after getting his PhD in engineering that he would be happler in law and is in his second year at the NYU School of Law.

And then there's Ann Pearson, whose husband is in the graduate tax program at NYU School of Law. "I've never paid any of my husband's tuition, nor be mine," she said. "We both borrowed money for our educations and both paid off our own loans. That way I can never say when I'm 35, 'I pot you through law school.' His education belongs to him, and mine to me,"

The Duchess of Windsor PEOPLE: Arrives in New York

Accompanied by two of her pug dogs, her attorney and a sec-retary, the Dochess of Windsor arrived in New York Tuesday sboard the Italian liner Raffaello. Commenting on life since the death of the duke two years ago, the duchess said, "I don't go out as much and I'm much lonelier." The former American socialite said that the British monarchy has changed since 1936 when the then King Edward VII had to abdicate to marry her, "They made a fuss then, but I don't think they would make a fuss now," she said, adding that she gets along well with the British royal family. The duchess, who said that she did not intend to write an autobiography ("That would be the most dreadful thing to do"), will be staying at New York's Waldorf Astoria for about

AN EXPLANATION: Inlie Nixon Eisenhower says President Nixon could have contested portions of his back tax bill but did not in order to encourage Americans to support the tax collection system. Speaking in Memphis, Mrs. Eisenhower said: "Frankly, my father's entire position on the tax matter has been one of trying to encourage people to support the Internal Revenue [Service] system."

Russian research chemist Pavel Litvinov. 34, who spent four years in exile in Siberia, has arrived in New York and says that he was happy to be in the "land of the immigrarits." Litvinov spent four months in prison and four years working in a Siberian mine from 1968 to 1972 "The fact that my name was known in the West saved me from more severe punishment," he said. He and his family were allowed to leave the Soviet Union last month.

In New York, a private investigation agency says that the tobacco heiress owes almost $33,000 for an investigation of a $10,000 hargiary at her New Jersey estate. In Trenton, the Animal Medical-Center of New York City is suing for $1.775 million, charging that "armed members of the Duke police department" halted research projects at Duke Farms in Hillborough Township, N.J. Also named in the suit are Elroy C. Leoppard, described as Miss Duke's "security adviser," and

The complaint says that Miss Duke gave the center notice on Feb. 1 that the lease was to be terminated on March 4. Four days later, the complaint charges, Leonpard, Amar and the azmed Duke police" forcibly took possession of the property and "confiscated" animals, records and laboratory facilities." The center says it will have to "expend years of addi-tional work to restore the research projects to their former status The center had been working on the Duke property since 1968.

The "Sonny and Cher" program. one of the top-rated CBS shows has been canceled for the fall season. Fred Silverman, programming chief of CBS, announced the news Priday but declined to say if the recent breakup of the couple's marriage had had any influence on the CBS decision Sonny Bono, 39, and Cher. 27 were married in October, 196, and split up last February. -SAMUEL JUSTICE:
